

Sexual and Gender Based Violence (SGBV) & Migration Fact Sheet

Sexual and gender-based violence (SGBV) forces many women, girls, and LGBTI persons to flee El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras. Family members, gangs, and drug traffickers most frequently perpetrate SGBV, but violence by police and other authorities is also widespread. Despite pervasive SGBV in the three countries staggering impunity levels persist, with an average of less than 10 percent of cases resulting in conviction. Many individuals and families fleeing SGBV are potentially eligible for protection under U.S. as well as Mexican refugee law, as the governments of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras fail to protect their citizens from SGBV.

Women and girls endure high rates of domestic and sexual violence in Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras

- In the first 10 months of 2017 the Guatemalan Public Ministry received 51,742 reports of violence against women and 10,963 reports of sexual violence against women and girls.¹ The total number of incidents is likely much higher, however, as many continue to go unreported.²
- According to a 2014 study, more than half of all Salvadoran women reported experiencing some form of violence, and a quarter were victims of sexual or physical violence.³
- In Honduras, 30,000 women report domestic violence each year, and a woman reports sexual violence every three hours.⁴ This represents a very small portion of the actual incidence of violence, due to widespread underreporting.⁵

Gangs use sexual violence as a strategy to maintain fear and control

- Gangs in Northern Triangle countries employ sexual violence as a strategy to maintain control over territories and populations. Rape is widespread and is employed by gang members to discipline girls, women, and their family members for failure to comply with the gang's demands and to demonstrate the gang's dominance over the community.⁶

- Girls, many aged 15 or younger, are forced to become “girlfriends” of gang members, and those who resist are subject to sexual violence, and in some cases killed.⁷ Forced recruitment of girls and women, and rape and sexual violence by gangs, constitutes a contemporary form of slavery.⁸
- Women and girls are frequently kidnapped and subject to repeated rape by multiple gang members, with girls as young as nine years old having been victims of gang rape.⁹
- In many cases, victims of sexual violence are tortured, killed, and dismembered, and their bodies left in clandestine graves, or in public areas to provoke fear in other women and girls.¹⁰
- Girls and young women threatened by gangs and subjected to forced recruitment or rape often go into hiding and stop attending school due to fear of leaving their homes.¹¹

Rates of gender-motivated killings have increased dramatically over the past several years

- Honduras has the highest femicide rate per capita in the world; a woman is murdered every 16 hours.¹²
- In El Salvador in 2017, a woman was murdered every 18 hours and 46 minutes.¹³
- On average, two women are murdered each day in Guatemala, and the number of women murdered each year has more than tripled since 2000.¹⁴

Members of the LGBTI community are targets of gender-based violence by families, gangs, and authorities

- Civil society organizations in Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras report that LGBTI people are at high risk for violence and extortion by gangs and organized criminal groups, hate crimes, and abuse by authorities, leading many LGBTI individuals to migrate in search of safety.¹⁵

- At least 145 LGBTI persons in El Salvador have been murdered since 2015, and many of those victims were subject to torture and mutilation.¹⁶ The number of transgender women murdered annually in El Salvador has increased 400 percent since 2003.¹⁷
- In Honduras, at least 170 LGBTI individuals were murdered between 2011 and 2016.¹⁸ LGBTI activists have been targets of violence and assassination.¹⁹
- In Guatemala, LGBTI individuals experience discrimination in access to health care, education, and employment. While reliable statistics are not available, hate crimes against LGBTI individuals are widespread, as is discrimination and violence committed by state authorities.²⁰

The vast majority of sexual and gender-based crimes are underreported and go unpunished

- In Guatemala, domestic violence goes unreported in an estimated 90 percent of cases.²¹ Causes of underreporting include social stigma toward survivors, fear of reprisal by the abuser, as well as unresponsiveness and ineffectiveness of the judicial system.²²
- Over 5,000 women have been murdered in Guatemala since 2000, and only 2 percent of these cases have resulted in convictions.²³
- In El Salvador, of the 662 violent deaths of women registered by the Public Prosecutor between 2013 and 2016 only 5 percent resulted in a conviction.²⁴
- In Honduras, less than 10 percent of murders of women result in a conviction.²⁵
- In El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras, LGBTI victims do not report violent crimes because they fear discrimination and abuse by authorities, and the vast majority of reported crimes against LGBTI people are not investigated.²⁶
