

CAM APPLICATION PROGRAM

CAM, or the Central American Minors Program, provides qualifying parents and legal guardians in the United States who are in certain immigration categories an opportunity to apply for their qualifying children to reunify with them in the United States.

Through CAM, parents and legal guardians can apply for qualifying children and certain family members in Guatemala, El Salvador, and Honduras to travel to the United States with refugee status. Those who are not granted refugee status may be able to apply for parole.

If you or someone you know is a parent or legal guardian in the U.S. in a qualifying immigration category, with an unmarried child under 21 who is a national of and located in El Salvador, Guatemala, or Honduras, you may be eligible to apply for CAM.

The qualifying immigration categories are:

- Lawful permanent resident
- Temporary Protected Status
- Parole
(for a minimum of one year)
- Deferred action
(for a minimum of one year)
- Deferred enforced departure (DED)
- Withholding of Removal
- Pending asylum application filed before May 15, 2021; or
- Pending U visa petition filed before May 15, 2021

KIND can help parents and legal guardians determine if they may be eligible for CAM, and if so, to prepare their applications for the program. KIND is partnering with the International Rescue Committee (IRC) for this project.

If you would like to find out if you or someone you know may be eligible to apply for CAM, or if you are seeking help with a CAM application, please make a referral!

KIND will screen your case and help you start the CAM application process if you are eligible.
